AN OLD TALE OF TWO CITIES.

Travel From New York to Philadelphia in Stage Wagon Days.

In the New York Gazette or Weekly Post Boy of May 9, 1768, appeared this notice:

To the Public:

That the Stage-Waggon, kept by John Barnhill, in Elm-Street, in Philadelphia, and John Mercereau, at the New-Blazing Star, near New-York, continues their Stages in two Days, from Powles-Hook Ferry, opposite New-York, to Philadelphia; returns from Philadelphia to Powles-Hook in two Days also; they will endeavor to oblige the Publick by keeping the best of Waggon and sober Drivers, and sets out from Powle-Hook and Philadelphia, on Mondays and Thursdays, punctually at Sunrise, and meets at Prince Town the same Nights, to exchange Passengers, and each return the Day after:

Those who are kind enough to encourage the Undertaking, are desired to cross Powles-Hook Ferry the Evenings before, as they must set off early. The Price for each Passenger is Ten Shillings to Prince Town, and from thence to Philadelphia, Ten Shillings more, Passage free: There will be but two Waggon, but four sets of fresh Horses, so it will be very safe for any Person to send Goods, as there are but two Drivers; they may exchange their Goods without any Mistake.

Persons may now go from New-York to Philadelphia, and back again in two Days, and remain in Philadelphia two Nights and one Day to do their Business in: The Publick may be assured that this Road is much the Shortest, than any other to Philadelphia, and regular Stages will be kept by the Publick's obliged humble Servants, JOHN MERCEREAU and JOHN BARNHILL.

To Prevent Exaggeration.

There was once a gentleman who, having killed a man, presented himself to the editor of a newspaper. "I have come," he said, "to tell you about a painful occurrence at my house. My brother-in-law and I had an argument, and I stabbed him, and then, in the excitement of the moment, I cut his throat. Knowing what exaggerated stories are apt to get into the newspapers, I thought I had better step around and tell you exactly what did happen."—London Spectator.

Ice Peaks of New Zealand.

In southern New Zealand the line of perpetual snow is much lower than it is in the Alps of Europe. It varies, of course, in different parts of the range; but, generally speaking, a mountain 12,000 feet in New Zealand carries as much snow and ice as one of 15,000 feet in the Swiss Alps, and New Zealanders point with pride to glaciers comparable to the Aletsch and the Mer de Glace.

The Only Way.

A ranchman who had spent all his life with horses and had had little experience with womankind got married. After the ceremony the bride and groom mounted their horses and started along the mountain trail toward home. Going along a ledge the bride's horse stumbled and fell down the steep embankment.

"It was mighty hard luck for both the woman and the horse," the ranchman said in telling the story of the accident. "Each of 'em broke a leg." "What did you do?" asked the friend. "Well, what could I do?" replied the other sorrowfully. "I shot 'em."—New York Post.

A Literal Interpretation.

Mrs. Browning had a new domestic named Agnes.

"Agnes," said the mistress, "did you put the clothes in soak?"

"Oh did not," answered the girl. "Did you want me to, m'm?"

"Why, certainly," was the reply.

"Very well," said Agnes.

About two hours later Agnes presented herself to her mistress.

"Oh her put them clothes in soak, m'm," she said, "but the pawsnbroker and give me only cheap dollars on the whole outfit. Here is the money, and it's sorry Oh m'm that ye bees so harried up."—Harper's Magazine.

Including Himself.

Arthur Asken—How did you like Europe? Bertha Blithere—Not very well. Why, actually every place we visited was overrun with foreigners.—Chicago News.

Man must always in some sense cling to the belief that the unknown is knowable.—Goethe.
